TECHNIQUES USED FOR PRINTING

SCREEN PRINTING

The only method for permanent printing on plastics which allows products printed with this technique to be used in the agricultural, chemical, construction and food industries. Our screen printing ink's are dishwasher safe, resistant to chemicals and abrasion. Its advantage is the ability to print permanently without colour limitation, on any surface size (flat and convex).

PAD PRINTING

A method of permanent and fast printing on plastics, which allows products printed with this technique to be used in the agricultural, chemical, construction and food industries. This printing technique is recommended for small products with a flat, small area printing with a small number of colours.

We test the adhesion of the prints according to standards: ISO 2409 or ASTM D3359-B DIN 53151.

We test the abrasiveness of the print according to the standard: ASTM D5264.

Principles of use:

The vessel should be placed on the field just after seeding rapeseed in autumn and after the last snow melts in the spring. Install it approximately 15 m from the field edge, always at the level of the plants' top. It is recommended to use at least four vessels for each plantation.

Pour water with a bit of dishwashing detergent up to the half of the vessel's height. The addition of the detergent will reduce the surface tension of water which will make the pests immerse in it easier.

Monitor the vessel daily, i.e. count the immersed pests and read the pest limit threshold on the table printed on the vessel. Replace water in the vessel each time.

The yellow vessel should be installed on a stick and raised with the growth of rapeseed.

After exceeding the pest limit threshold, decide whether you want to spray the field. The yellow vessel helps to diagnose the level of harmfulness done by such insects as: ceutorrhynchus, meligethes aeneus and dasineura brassicae.

Frame Standard 1/10 m²

min. order 100 pcs.

Frame Mega 1/4 m²

RAM0010M

min. order 100 pcs.

Principles of use:

Measuring the germination:

Put the frame along the row crop. Count the plants as long as you reach the number which determines the distance between the rows. The result has to be multiplied x10. Repeat the measurement in several places and calculate the average. The measurement of germination helps to make the decision about the re-sowing. Detailed operating instructions for the measuring frame are available at www.measures.bottprinti.com

Measuring the damaged crops and the number of weeds:

Make a square and count the plants inside the frame. The result has to be multiplied x10. Repeat the measurement in several places and calculate the average. The determination of the number of damaged plants helps not only the framers but also the hunters to specify the damages caused by the wild animals. Measuring frame has the same function by the farmers insurances.
